

Aussie Company Polaris to Supply Headsets to Major Contact Centre in the UK

Polaris Communications, a local Australian company, is proud to announce that it is now the preferred supplier of contact centre headsets to the West Yorkshire Police in the United Kingdom.

When the West Yorkshire Police announced that it would be selecting a company to supply all of its regional contact centres with headsets and associated peripherals, a number of large international telecommunication companies responded to the tender request.

Polaris also responded to the tender request through its UK distributor, Communications Solutions; and recommended its Soundpro Wideband headset which is widely used in call centres throughout Australia.

The recommended Soundpro Wideband headsets, which were developed and launched by Polaris in August 2010, met the strict stipulations outlined by the West Yorkshire Police, and were chosen for their excellent value for money, quality and comfort, backed by an extended warranty.

Polaris Communications was successful despite being up against stiff competition and its attention to detail and focus on high quality products and services, which is widely recognised locally in Australia, is now gaining exposure in the UK.

In the future, Polaris will be developing more products using Australian design and engineering talent; products that it believes will offer substantially better value than its larger overseas competitors.
