Polycom certifies Polaris' Soundpro Wideband Headsets

Polycom is a well-known global brand. The company is a manufacturer and distributor of voice communication solutions. Originally known for its conference phones, Polycom is now one of the major suppliers of business telephones into the general office market as well video collaboration software and group video systems.

Polycom prides itself on providing its customers with 'a solution' rather than just 'a product', and as such recognises the essential role that headsets play in completing the 'communication solution'. It has therefore developed a Headset Compatibility list that includes all the headsets that are compatible with its phones, in particular, the Polycom SoundPoint IP and VVX phones.

Polaris is excited to announce that two of Polaris' Soundpro branded headsets have been certified by Polycom and included in the Polycom Headset Compatibility list; being listed as the first two options under the Analogue Headsets section. This certification provides Polycom customers with peace of mind that these headsets are completely compatible with their Polycom system.

The Soundpro brand, and in particular the Soundpro Wideband Headsets, are renowned for their high quality and excellent sound. They are Australia's leading headset brand and are also becoming well known in the UK, especially in the emergency services field. Being certified by Polycom and included in the Polycom Headset Compatibility list will add to this global recognition.
